Fireworks tonight expected to attract 10,000

By Ed Donnelly
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Carbondale's Fourth of July fireworks display and celebration—expected to draw 10,000 persons—will mark the largest Independence Day festivity in Southern Illinois.

The fifth annual display, sponsored by the Carbondale Lion's Club, will begin at 8:30 p.m. at Glenn "Abe" Martin Field and will follow a Coal Belt League softball game that starts at 5 p.m.

"The display costs $1,000 and is as large as any in Southern Illinois," Howard Shand, Lion's Club president, said.

Similar celebrations are scheduled for DuQuoin, Murphysboro, Herrin, West Frankfort and Mount Vernon.

Four thousand persons are expected to gather at DuQuoin State Fairgrounds July 4 for a $1,500 fireworks display and two 50-mile "supermodified" stock car races, according to Fred Huff, publicity director of Hayes Fair Acres Co.

Riverside Park, in Murphysboro, will be the site of the 55th Annual Booster's Club July 4 Celebration. A fireworks display at 10 p.m. will follow a "variety show" and a display of 75 antique autos, Carl Worthen, president of the Murphysboro Booster's Club said.

A fireworks display, softball game and barbecue will highlight July 4 activities in Herrin. The "Little League" will sponsor the festivities to be held in Herrin City Park.

"Honor America Day," will be celebrated July 4 in West Frankfort with speeches and a fireworks display at 5 p.m. at West Frankfort City Park, according to Robert Collins, West Frankfort Chamber of Commerce spokesman.

The Mount Vernon American Legion will sponsor a veteran's reunion and fireworks display beginning at dusk in the Mount Vernon Fairgrounds.

Southern Illinois camping and picnicking facilities also will provide opportunities for July 4 activities, but, according to park officials, choice recreation spots are dwindling.

All campsites within Crab Orchard Wildlife Refuge, Little Grassy and Devil's Kitchen Lake areas are filled, according to H.T. Gualdoni, Crab Orchard Wildlife Director.

Ed Henschel, Murphysboro District Ranger, said the most popular areas in Shawnee National Forest are filled. They are the Natural Bridge area, near Pomona; Clearsprings, near Alto Pass; and Fountain Bluff, in Gorham.

Henschel wished to advise persons that Kincaid Lake, located five miles northwest of Murphysboro, is off limits for July 4 and that no fireworks are allowed in any Shawnee National Forest area.

'Bucky' Fuller closes SIU-Carbondale office

By Sue Roll
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Carbondale office of R. Buckminster Fuller, designer, world planner and distinguished research professor at SIU, have been closed, formally ending Fuller's 13-year association with SIU-Carbondale.

Fuller's personal library and an administrative office will be maintained at the Edwardsville campus, staffed by Shirley Swansen, who will serve as Fuller's personal secretary. Fuller's appointment was permanently transferred to Edwardsville last January, and his office here officially closed June 30.

Naomi Wallace, Fuller's personal secretary at the Carbondale office, said Fuller and his wife have not yet decided where they will take up permanent residence. St. Louis, Washington, D.C. and the East Coast are possibilities, she said.

Fuller and his wife, Ann, completed moving their possessions to New York from their house—a geodesic dome in the Fuller design—on South Forest Street last week. The dome is for sale, Mrs. Wallace said.

Mrs. Wallace said only eight persons remained at the Carbondale office when it was closed last week. All of them have either been reassigned, taken other jobs or continued to work with Fuller at the newly-established Design Science Institute in Washington, D.C., according to Mrs. Wallace.

One of the student workers, Ms. Swansen, is now Fuller's personal secretary at Edwardsville.

The World Game operations, now called World Resources Inventory, will fall under the Design Science Institute in Washington, Mrs. Wallace said.

The formation of the institute was announced in New York last week. The institute will carry out Fuller projects

Review panel uncertain of Taylor's plea

By Jan Tranchita
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Student Conduct Review Board will not meet to resolve the student body president controversy unless it is asked to do so by a representative of the president's office, Lawrence Dennis, review board chairman, said Monday.

Jon Taylor has appealed former student president George Camille's decision which termed him ineligible and which named Jim Peters the president. Taylor requested arbitration by the conduct board early last week.

"We are not trying to pass off the responsibility," Dennis explained. Dennis said he questions the board's legal jurisdiction to hear this case on student appeal and not by presidential referral.

"We are supposed to deal with disciplinary appeals of students and other matters which have been referred to us by the president," Dennis said.

Taylor and Peters have said they will abide by the board's decision, but Peters does not consider board action to be arbitration but rather a simple decision.

"All the information surrounding Jon's eligibility and grades will have to come out at the hearing," Peters said.

Dennis said he has written Taylor concerning the referral procedure and suggested that Taylor request the president's office to refer the decision to the board.

Challenger Pucinski disagrees

Percy takes liberal stand on abortion

By Jan Tranchita
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

CHARLESTON—U. S. Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., butted heads with Democratic challenger U.S. Rep. Roman Pucinski over abortion here Monday in a meeting sponsored by the Association of Illinois Student Governments (AISG).

Taking a liberal stand, incumbent Sen. Percy said any abortion decision should remain "between the mother and her doctor."

But Pucinski stated, "I'm opposed to abortion. It is not a wise move to trigger problems such as those in New York. I stand behind President Nixon in this issue."

In a rare presidential action, Nixon recently reaffirmed his opposition to abortion and supported the repeal of New York's liberal abortion laws.

Pucinski also said that the rights of a third party—the unborn baby—must be considered.

Percy and Pucinski debated other issues in the morning meeting at Eastern Illinois University. Student body presidents from eight state-supported universities and community colleges questioned the congressmen for 90 minutes.

SIU was represented by Jim Peters and executive assistant Dave McGuire. Pucinski repeatedly charged Percy with "waffling on issues. Percy has tried to relate to all different groups and therefore has not identified with any major issues."

"It is fruitless to predict where Percy will stand in the future. He argues for education, but votes against it. I may take unpopular positions," Pucinski told about 100 persons, "but I do what I honestly believe is right."

Percy lined up his November reelection forces behind co-sponsorship of the 18-year-old vote, his stand against campus violence, interest in the elderly and his fight against hard drugs.

He also said Pucinski is "not his own man" and must "wait for Mayor Daley to tell him what to do." Touching on other issues, both congressmen said United States' interest in Israel is substantially bigger than our interest in Vietnam. Percy termed it a "matter of vital national interest" since 80 per cent of the world's oil comes from the Middle East.

Percy and Pucinski also voiced support for veteran's benefit increases. Pucinski has co-sponsored a bill to increase tuition rebates and stipends for returning veterans. "The least we can do," Pucinski said, "is take care of returning veterans who are seeking education."

Regarding legalization of marijuana, Rep. Pucinski said he's against legislation that would ease penalties for drug peddlers but, like Percy, supported decriminalization of laws involving private users.

Under questioning, Pucinski admitted he'd "swallowed a goldfish but never smoked" marijuana.

Peters asked the congressmen to take a stand on guaranteed income legislation. Again, both men agreed that an increase in federal aid to welfare recipients is imperative.

"The present system is not working," Percy said. "It pays for people not to work."

In addition to upping federal aid, Pucinski supports a welfare referendum that encourages employment of aid recipients. Recipients would keep their wages and still receive welfare payments until they reach a $6,000 yearly earning level, Pucinski said.

Who would each man support for President?

Percy supports Nixon although Spiro Agnew would not be his first choice for Nixon's running mate.

Pucinski's personal choice is Edmund Muskie, but he said he would support the nominee of his party.

Percy termed the new convention rules which McGovern helped develop a "valuable contribution." He said it is "high time" for Republicans to follow suit and open party conventions to more women, blacks and young people.

Federal court won't enter Democratic delegate dispute

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. District Court Monday refused to enter the dispute over the allotting of California delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

While the candidates relaxed, forces of George McGovern asked Judge George L. Hart Jr. to restore the more than 150 delegates stripped from the South Dakota senator by the Democratic Credentials Committee.

Hart declined to act, saying the question of whether the state's winner-take-all primary was fair and equitable is a matter to be decided by the party convention, not by the courts.

He said the judiciary should intervene in party conflicts only when they involve a clear constitutional principle.

In a parallel and similar ruling delivered at the same time, Hart upheld the Credentials Committee's action in unseating Chicago Mayor Richard Daley and 58 other Illinois delegates to the convention.

In anticipation of appeals in both cases, Hart said the U.S. Court of Appeals would hear arguments in the cases Tuesday despite the Independence Day holiday. The losing attorneys in each case told newsmen they will appeal.

The South Dakota senator was spending the holiday weekend at his farm on the Eastern Shore of Maryland. Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey flew home for the holiday at Waverly, Minn. Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine was in his home state at Kennebunkport.

That left the Democratic political stage to the court case and the continuing Credentials Committee proceedings in Washington.

The credentials panel still was plowing through a record array of challenges to the seating of delegates at the Democratic National Convention which opens at Miami Beach July 10.

McGovern held a runaway lead in delegate strength. The California credentials battle, in court and later on the convention floor, is likely to determine whether he can convert it into a first-ballot nominating majority.

That would take 1,509 votes. The Associated Press count of delegate strength Monday put McGovern at 1,276.9. Humphrey had 499.05, Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama 381, Muskie 225.55. There were 457.9 uncommitted delegates.

The court test stemmed from the decision of the Credentials Committee to deprive McGovern of at least 151 of the California nominating votes he captured in a winner-take-all primary.

projects and Fuller's ideas and designs, such as the geodesic dome.

The president of the institute will be Glenn A. Olds, president of Kent State University in Ohio and former U.S. ambassador to the United Nations Economic and Social Council.

Olds said the institute would concentrate on making Fuller's books, speeches and papers available to anyone who wants them.

The institute's "world advisory council" will include Arthur C. Clark, science and science fiction writer; Margaret Mead, anthropologist; Jonas E. Salk, medical scientist; U. Thant, former secretary general of the United Nations; Constantinos A. Dxiadis, urban planner; and Jerome B. Wiesner, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and science adviser to the late President John F. Kennedy. Fuller has not been in Carbondale since June, 1971, except for a few days last week to make moving arrangements.

Mrs. Wallace said the Fullers will be traveling in Europe throughout July. Later this summer they will go to India.

Fuller has been associated with SIU since 1959, when he was named research professor. He was named university professor in 1968, and now holds the title of distinguished visiting professor. Fuller has not formally taught at the University for many years.

Mrs. Wallace, Fuller's personal secretary for 10 years, has joined President David R. Derge's staff.

Other Fuller projects are his Dymaxion Sky-Ocean World Map which eliminates usual cartographic distortion and shows how close Asia is to North America; the Dymaxion car and other designs based on his concept of the world as a space ship; and his "synergetic-energetic" geometry, which uses the tetrahedron as its basic structural unit.

Fuller designed the "Skybubble", which housed the U.S. exhibit at Expo '67 in Montreal.

NOW backs Taylor claim

The SIU Chapter of the National Organization for Women (NOW) supports Jon Taylor as student body president.

Carolyn C. Weiss, president of SIU's NOW chapter, said the full membership passed a resolution Friday supporting Taylor's claim to the presidency.

The NOW resolution points out that Taylor was not informed before the election of his ineligibility. This prohibited the opportunity of black students to nominate an alternative black candidate, the resolution states. The resolution also points out that Taylor testified before the Citizen Review Committee against minority hiring practices at SIU. Since this hearing took place before questions were raised about Taylor's eligibility, NOW suggests that his testimony might have influenced administrators present at the hearing who have now expressed support for Jim Peters who now has claimed he is legally student body president.

Garbage bag

To the Daily Egyptian:

It appears as if some people think "Devil's Kitchen" refers to a garbage bag under their own kitchen sink, and that's both a sad and ignorant assumption. Try dumping a few crusty cans and raunchy bottles under your own sink for a while and you should notice that they don't just fade away; they mold around until they're properly removed.

Next time you enjoy a local beauty area, consider the alternatives; you can keep the place clean or turn it into a dump. It's that simple.

Chick or chic?

To the Daily Egyptian:

In searching for a cause to fight for, the radical element of our female population must resort to chicane (chickane?) tactics, as is expected, to help achieve their not so well defined goals. I say this after reading a response by Betty Goodwin, (D.E. June 28) to a letter I had recently written to the Egyptian.

It greatly appears that Ms. Goodwin had either misread my letter, or just simply took my words out of context. "To enjoy a lifetime servant", in the manner in which it was used, can't possibly have anything to do with "the male bourgeois mind," as she put it. Whether the servant be male or female makes absolutely no difference. The terms and obligations of the "servant" is the issue at stake.

Ms. Goodwin's style of chicanery is indeed upsetting. Need I point out that there is a difference between rhetorical question and a statement of fact? To use "as he says" followed by a twisted version of what I actually did say is a dull, typically-radical method to pull an issue. Nowhere did I make mention of a "wife". And in quotations no less! Where I come from they call that "lying." In a university, that's one step below plagiarism. In other words, that's a no-no.

It seems that many women's liberators are demanding a derogatory meaning to a certain term. The only reason I can see as to why they have created such an absurd issue out of it, is because it gives them something else to hawk about. Does this word ring a bell? Chick (shek, shik), n. (Fr., schicken, arrange), smart elegance of style and manner. adj. (chicquer, chicquest), stylish.—Webster's New World Dictionary, 1967. "Indicative of an attitude towards women that is dehumanizing?" I think not,

Ms. Goodwin. Whether a young lady considers herself poultry or chic just depends upon where her head is at; not on how the word is spelled may I add. Here again, I wouldn't dream that our radical lovelies would ever consider pecking about the possible origins of a word they so heavily base their revolution upon. Just because so many women's liberators are birdbrains doesn't necessarily mean they are poultry. Their attitude certainly prohibits them from being considered chicks.

There's nothing like a little factual tidbit of information to blow your whole case with. Oh yes, what was it that Ms. Goodwin was saying about objections to the words "nigger," "queer," and "faggot?" They have slightly different connotations from the word "chick," to say the least. Don't worry though, Ms. Goodwin, I probably wouldn't consider you a chick; or is that chic?

In so far as the rest of Ms. Goodwin's letter is concerned, I will cop out as she did since "the other responses are not worth mentioning."

Adieu.

No more suffering

To the Daily Egyptian:

Having witnessed the suffering—in terms of physical and psychological deprivation—inflicted upon victims who are the fruit of accidental and unwilling motherhood, having witnessed that no church or other well-intentioned social organization is omnipotent enough to sufficiently alleviate this suffering, having witnessed that the effects of such early deprivation follow the victim all the days of his life and often thwart self-realization, often cause acts against society, often result in acts against oneself (even suicide), I sincerely hope that we will soon see the day when legalized abortion is available to everyone who desires it, regardless of their ability to pay. Then let us work toward free birth control information and contraceptives for those persons who are unable to take the responsibility for their acts. Then let us work toward free sterilization clinics for all who oppose parenthood. The cost in dollars for these services would be minute compared to the savings in terms of ruined lives and the subsequent cost to society. Then, let love be the basis for motherhood. Let children flourish in families which value their existence and do not reject them for taking away mother's and father's "freedom."

Peace, to you, Father Genisio. With all respect for your views, I must say, it is more merciful to abort than to abuse.

The Innocent Bystander First Lady's Man

By Arthur Hoppe
Chronicle Features

Washington, Jan. 20, 1973 — Hubert Humphrey moved into the White House today.

Mr. Humphrey told reporters that President George Wallace could count on his loyalty. "President Wallace is a fine American," he said, "whose fine stand on busing I have always supported — among many other fine stands on busing."

Mr. Humphrey accompanied his attractive wife, Muriel, who made history by being elected the Nation's First Lady last November. The need to elect the First Lady, rather than leaving the important office to chance, became apparent early in the Presidential campaign.

In the past, candidates' wives delicately shunned the position, saying in ladylike fashion that they were certainly for their husbands being elected president, if that's what they wanted, but implying they'd much prefer living in a tiny cottage somewhere, baking brownies.

But this time, the candidates' wives were out actively campaigning for the job.

"I know what I could do as First Lady," Mrs. Humphrey declared as early as last May. "I know what it would mean if I came back as First Lady to the projects I have visited as a campaigner. I've made a lot of promises around the country that I hope to keep."

The XXVII Amendment, making the office elective, was vigorously supported by Women's Lib and those hoping to enliven an otherwise dull campaign. It was quickly ratified by the states.

Washington, Jan. 21 — The newly-elected First Lady told a crowded press conference today she planned to "employ Hubert's capabilities to the fullest" in his unofficial role as First Lady's Man.

"I feel he is perfectly able to take over many of the traditional duties of the First Lady, such as conducting television tours of the White House and presenting bouquets to delegations from poverty-stricken areas," she said, "freeing me for more important tasks."

Mr. Humphrey, smiling bravely, later told a group of women reporters that he was "very happy to be in the White House at last" and that he was working plans to redecorate the place. "I do like cerise," he said, "don't you?"

Meanwhile, rumors circulated of friction between the Nation's two First Families at their initial breakfast together this morning.

Mr. Humphrey reportedly complained that his third-floor bedroom had no window and was overcrowded with brooms and dust-pans. President Wallace is said to have replied that Mr. Humphrey was "nothin' but a pointy-headed Lady's Man."

At the same time, a spat developed between Mrs. Humphrey and Mrs. Wallace over who should plan the President's daily menus. The two have been at odds since last summer's bitter campaign for First Lady, when Mrs. Humphrey accused Mrs. Wallace of being "too inexperienced and uncultured" and Mrs. Wallace retorted that Mrs. Humphrey was "too old for the job."

Late today, the White House announced that Mr. Humphrey, as First Lady's Man, would plan the White House menus "in full consultation with Mrs. Humphrey and Mrs. Wallace."

Washington, January 22 — Mr. Humphrey left the White House, bag and baggage, today, filed suit for divorce and announced he would henceforth devote his energies to repealing the XXVII Amendment. "It was easier," he said grimly, "being Vice President under Lyndon Johnson."

"Boy are they bullish on America!"

SIU women recount abortion experiences

(Editor's note: This is the fourth of a five-part series on abortion. Today, several SIU students relate their individual abortion experiences.)

By Sue Roll
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Cindy, an SIU student, learned she was pregnant the first week in March. Marriage was out of the question. She didn't want to keep the baby herself or give it up for adoption. One week later, Cindy was no longer pregnant and still leading the usual life of a college student.

She is one of an estimated 75-100 Carbondale area women—most of them SIU students—who go to New York or other states for legal abortions each month. Most women report their abortion experiences as positive ones, with little pain and much relief. Similarly, most girls find little problem in adjusting to the abortion once it is done.

"My first reaction was to tell the guy," said one girl. "I saw abortion as the first method of taking care of the problem. I knew I couldn't have the baby. I didn't love the guy. We had broken up anyway. I couldn't go to school and raise the baby. And I could never, never give it away. I would always want to know where it was, what was happening to it. Abortion was the only way."

"I didn't have the money to keep the baby and raise it," said another student. "And we couldn't get married. I looked into everything before making up my mind. There just wasn't anything else to do." Relationships with the fathers of the babies range from steady, long term relationships to one night stands. "To him, I think I was just a good lay," one girl admitted.

Some married couples seek abortion because of a surprise pregnancy that could disrupt plans for education and careers. "We couldn't have afforded a baby now even if we would have wanted it," said one woman. "And I think it would have put a real stress on our relationship."

Failure to use contraceptives

Most of the women seeking abortions have become pregnant by failure to use birth control measure, according to a survey of referrals through the family planning center.

Yet the majority of women have become pregnant through relatively steady relationships rather than "one-night stand" arrangements. Why, then, since birth control devices are so easily available, do the women not protect themselves from becoming pregnant? The reasons vary from fear of the pill to thinking that contraception is unnecessary because of the infrequency of sexual contact.

"A lot of them just don't think it will happen to them," Ms. Hawkes said.

Some girls know it can happen to them and still do not use birth control. One young Carbondale woman has had three abortions within a period of two years—all the pregnancies resulting from steady sex relations with the same partner.

Another girl admitted she wanted to get pregnant. "I think unconsciously I almost planned it, hoping for something better. I wanted him to marry me. And that's strange because I've always thought that was the dirtiest thing a girl could do."

But for the majority of girls pregnancy is the last thing they want. "When I found out I was pregnant, abortion was the first thing that crossed my mind," recalled one SIU coed. "Suicide was the second."

Mrs. Dahl pointed out that a number of pregnancies result from contraception failure—too many missed pills, a perforated condom, a dislodged IUD or diaphragm. "Or by the time the girl decides she needs contraception, it is too late," Mrs. Dahl said. "It's usually an immediate need and it normally takes time to arrange an appointment to get the pill."

Among Catholic women, in particular, still another rationale can be seen. Sharon Young, psychologist who does referrals with the clergy service, said Catholic girls with strong traditional Catholic backgrounds are reluctant to protect themselves against pregnancy ahead of time, especially if they are single. "The church teaches that a sin you intend to commit is worse than a sin of passion, and so they don't protect themselves and become pregnant," she said.

Psychological support needed

But it's rough going for those women without "his kind of support." "Some of them aren't behind the girls," Ms. Young said. "Not often. But it happens, and when it does, it's devastating."

"I left on a Saturday night to go to the Women's Medical Clinic in New York," said one student. "The boy wouldn't even take me to the bus. I felt very lost at first, but then I just forced myself to be strong and remembered all the people who were behind me."

Many relationships break up after the abortion. "I'd heard that they give you three months to last after an abortion," said Laura, who recently had an abortion in Kansas. "It took us 13 days."

"I guess I expected too much from him," she continued. "I wanted him to take care of me. But he didn't want to know anything about what had happened. He didn't want to talk about it. I felt that all he wanted was to get rid of the kid. Trying times like that can really bring you apart if the relationship isn't super solid."

"It's really bad when you're sick and pregnant and don't know what to do." "And when it really hurts is when you really love someone and then they fail to give that basic thing—the love, the support."

Men often uncertain

Sharon Young, who does abortion referrals through the Clergy Counseling Service, said, "Many times the men don't know what they should do. They think it's better to not talk about it and that the girl wants to put it out of her mind. But often it's just these things that really need to be talked out." Parental reaction also varies. "Generally, I think most parents would be more accepting of the situation than the girls give them credit for," Rosemary Hawkes, who does local abortion referrals, said. Ms. Hawkes and other counselors agreed that the majority of women they counsel decide against telling their parents.

"My mother's first reaction was defensive," said

Jean, who had a New York abortion last winter. "But I was in hysterics, too, she was more concerned about me."

"My parents had been completely, 100 per cent against abortion before, but now they can see that at times it is necessary," said another girl. "My parents had really had a hard time with us," said Jean. "One of my brothers is on drugs. Another is a juvenile delinquent. I was the only normal nice kid in the family and then I went and blew it. But my parents were really good about it. We really shared it. They saw me as being older for the first time. They couldn't think of me as a little girl anymore."

Most of the women interviewed were able to set up abortion appointments within a day or two of their meeting with local referral sources.

Abortion experience common

Abortion is becoming so common that a woman is likely to meet others going to New York or Kansas with her. One of the clergy counselors said one girl told him she met eight other girls on the plane who were going to New York for abortions.

Once the girl gets to the clinic she is interviewed by a nurse or aide who usually stays with her during the entire time she is at the clinic. Some of the clinics in New York are fairly modern. The clinic in Kansas City is in an old hospital in a deteriorating black neighborhood.

Laura, who had her abortion in Kansas, said the appearance of the hospital is rather startling at first, but it is very clean inside and the personnel are extremely helpful and supportive.

"It was really a nice and pleasant experience," she said. "Once you get there, you fill out a form telling your relationship with the guy, why you weren't on birth control, how you go the money for the abortion, your future plans, all that kind of thing."

"After you get the anesthetic, you are left alone for a while before the doctor comes in. Once it begins, it's over before you know it. You feel a slight cramping, and some girls say there is a very slight sensation of pain. You can feel a sensation of scraping, but it isn't really pain. And that's all there is to it," Laura said.

"After it was over I told the doctor 'thank you.' He squeezed my foot." After the abortion, the women are put in a recovery room for about an hour. A nurse or aide will stay with them if they prefer. "They give you cookies or crackers and Coke," said one girl. "The relaxed, friendly atmosphere of the place is really nice."

"They give you penicillin afterward to make sure there will be no infection," said Jean. "And they tell you not to have sex for a month. You can start your birth control pills five days after the abortion, just as if it were a normal period." Then after an hour or so, the woman is free to return home. "It's the best of a bad situation," said another girl.

Relief is universal

How do the women feel after it is all over? Relief seems to be the universal response. "I felt as if the load of the world had been taken off my shoulders," one woman said. "I was me again. I could go on living my life as I had planned," another said. "I'll tell you how I felt," declared one student. "In a word—'fa-a-a-ntastic!'"

Most girls seem to have little trouble adjusting to the abortion. Do they ever think of the fetus as a baby? Some do. Some don't.

"It was a problem I had to take care of," one girl said. "I hardly felt any different at all. In the early weeks you just don't feel pregnant. It never seemed real to me at all. It wasn't a baby to me. It was a problem."

Another girl had a different view. "I thought about it as a future baby. I even called it Jeremiah, even though I knew I wanted the abortion. After it's over you find yourself smiling more at other little babies and sometimes I still think about it."

"But it's not a feeling of regret or guilt. It's more a feeling of curiosity. Would most girls advise other women to have abortions if they want them? 'Definitely yes,' one girl said. 'There's really nothing to it. You should be absolutely sure it's what you want, but then once you do there is absolutely nothing to be afraid of. It's like having your tonsils out. Not even that severe, in fact.' "It was the best choice I could have made under the circumstances," another girl said. "And I'm sure it's the same for other girls. Why wreck your life for no reason?"

Talk on collective bargaining slated Thursday morning

"Lunch and Learn," a weekly series presented by the Division of Continuing Education, has scheduled a short presentation and discussion on collective bargaining for professors at 11:30 a.m. Thursday in the Mississippi Room of the Student Center.

William Herr of the department of agricultural industries and Addison Hickman of the department of economics, both members of the American Association of Professors (AAUP), will lead the discussion.

Future topics for "Lunch and Learn" for the summer quarter are as follows:

—July 13: "A Visit to China" presented by Oliver Caldwell of the department of higher education.

—July 27: "The American Federation of Teachers (AFT) focuses on collective bargaining" presented by Jonathan Seldin of the department of mathematics.

—August 3: "A presentation by the Audubon Society" by Ms. Carolis Belmont.

The sessions will vary in format and will include lectures, demonstrations, musical entertainment and panel discussions.

The series is aimed at achieving audience participation and the establishment of relations between the University community and the Carbondale community.

All members of the University and the Carbondale community are welcomed to participate in the Thursday series of "Lunch and Learn."

The registration fee per luncheon is $1.65. Further information on the series and registration for the programs can be obtained from Patricia Bauhs, Division of Continuing Education, 453-2285.

SGAC to offer films, programs

A budget of approximately $4,000 will be used by the Student Government Activities Council (SGAC) to sponsor film showings and musical programs summer quarter. Dotti Davis, SGAC chairman, said Monday.

Plans for the allocation of SGAC's summer quarter budget and programming were made last week at an organizational meeting of SGAC.

No definite schedule of events has been compiled, said Ms. Davis.

However, she said that films with an admission price, probably 75 cents, will be shown every other weekend, probably in Furr Auditorium. On weekends when admission films are not being shown, said Ms. Davis, free films will be presented.

Campus has sports activities for all handicapped students

By Elliot Tompkin
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

Ray Clark hasn't let a bout with polio affect his love and participation in sports. At SIU there are plenty of physical activities to keep any handicapped student physically active.

A three-medal winner in last summer's Pan-American wheelchair games in Jamaica, Clark will compete in the August Paralympics wheelchair games at Heidelberg, West Germany.

Clark will compete in freestyle swimming, novice archery, discus, javelin, shot put and 100 yard dash. He was also named to the 12-man basketball squad that will represent the United States in the international event.

Clark isn't alone in his eagerness to participate in sports activities. There are many handicapped students who participate in various activities on campus.

"There is virtually no activity that a handicapped student can't get into," Dr. Edith Spees of Handicapped Student Services said.

"Handicapped students really care about one another," Dr. Spees said. "They encourage participation on all levels. If strenuous activity is impossible, there are other activities like score keeping and announcing."

Harry Jakobson, one of SIU's better known wheelchair athletes, encourages all interested students to participate in whatever athletic activities they enjoy.

"Handicapped students don't like to think of themselves as an organized group," Jakobson said. "We participate in any activity that we may happen to enjoy."

Jakobson's wife, Margaret enjoys relating the story of the struggle she went through before she was allowed to try her hand at horseback riding. But she did it, and she had a "real good time," she said.

Recreational activities for the handicapped include, swimming, bowling, track events, fishing, motorcycle riding, horseback riding, archery, and any other thing that the handicapped student enjoys.

If one prefers strenuous competition to simple recreation, there are the SIU Squids, a wheelchair basketball team.

The Squids belong to a conference and play a regular schedule. There are approximately 15 players on the squad, according to Jakobson.

Money is a major obstacle for handicapped athletes. A special chair, bought by Clark for his upcoming trip cost $500. "Most of the money for equipment comes from our own pockets," according to Jakobson.

The National Wheelchair Sports Foundation pays most of the cost of sending athletes to international competition. About 75 per cent of Clark's travelling expenses will be picked up by the foundation.

Contributions are always being sought for equipment and other expenses incurred, Jakobson said. Last year Johnny Cash presented the Squids with a personal check for $500 after appearing at the Arena.

Oomph!

Wheelchair discus ace Ray Clark shows form while working out for International Paralympics Games in Heidelberg, West Germany, in August. Clark qualified for six events for the U.S. team.

Fischer turned down

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — The sponsors of the world chess championship have rejected Bobby Fischer's demand for more money to meet Russian titleholder Boris Spassky. Fischer has until noon Tuesday to show up or forfeit the match.

With the match in danger of collapse, a British banker, anxious to see it go on, offered Monday to pour the equivalent in pounds sterling of $130,000 into the pot in hopes of enticing the 29-year-old American grandmaster to Iceland.

Dr. Anthony Saidy, at whose father's house in New York City Fischer reportedly stayed last week, said, "Bobby has not made up his mind." Saidy, an international chess master from Los Angeles, said he had talked to Fischer by phone.

The Russians, from Spassky here in Iceland to the Soviet Chess Federation in Moscow, protested the fact that the World Chess Federation-FIDE granted a postponement of Fischer's appearance until Tuesday. The match had been scheduled to start Sunday.

The six-man board of the Icelandic Chess Federation, sponsors of the 24-game match, rejected Fischer's demands for 30 per cent of the gate receipts. This would amount to considerable sums for both Fischer and Spassky because the match could last as long as two months.
